

Wednesday, March 15, 2006

Top shelf

Dance memories: Video clips spice up trivia game on DVD

By Bobak Esfarjani
USA TODAY

Just in time for March Madness comes what's billed as the first college basketball DVD trivia game.

Snap TV's NCAA Basketball DVD Trivia Challenge was developed with the NCAA and features highlights of dozens of college stars compiled from 100 years of college basketball. Players from Kareem Abdul-Jabbar (then Lew Alcindor) to Michael Jordan to Allen Iverson can be seen in the highlights performing the same moves, and performing in the same situations, that made them tournament heroes.

Players accumulate points by answering trivia questions related to the different NCAA basketball highlights. The game is played through a DVD player, so answering questions only takes a touch of the remote. There are hundreds of unique games, lasting 15 minutes each, available on the DVD.

Available in major retail outlets, NCAA Basketball DVD Trivia Challenge is listed at $24.95 and is recommended for ages 12 and up. Other Snap TV sports titles include NCAA Football Challenge and MLB Grand Slam Trivia.

Hoops pursuits:
Game is $24.95.